

women WHO MOVE the City

MOVERS & SHAKERS

by Sarah Vansciver

San Diego Magazine is proud to present its fifth annual Women Who Move the City event, which honors the dynamic local women who work tirelessly to bring positive change, support women in business and enhance our community. This year, 77 vibrant women have been nominated for this prestigious honor, and one will be given the award at the Scripps Seaside Forum on September 15. San Diego Magazine publisher Jim Fitzpatrick, along with the four past recipients, will select the 2010 "Woman of the Year." From a chief marketing guru and a San Diego State University dean to a champion of children's rights and a former Navy mayor of San Diego, these women have set a high bar for this distinction in regard to their human excellence and unfailing dedication to making a difference.

STEPHANIE SEGAL ORTEGA

Program Manager | Promise2Kids

Leading force behind the Guardian Scholars Program, which assists young adults who are former foster children in attending college and obtaining various degrees through continued education; mentors more than 50 San Diego college students